ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A structured document is converted independent of the application that created the structured document. A structured document, such as SGML and XML, is parsed to convert the structured document on an element by element basis. For 5   each element identified control is passed to an element handler established for that identified element. Each element handler performs the function of parsing the element for which it was established and generates a corresponding XHTML content fragment.

10